

I would like to remind the Chairman that he is a public servant, serving in a government established "by the people, for the people."

The people's opposition to the proposed changes has been overwhelming. We, the American people, understand that our liberty is best protected by ensuring a variety of forums, and a vigorous debate including the full range of opinions, for topics that affect our lives.

Permitting the accumulation of power in ever fewer hands curtails that freedom. If the Chairman feels that his own opinion forces him to take steps against the public's clearly expressed will and interests he should immediately resign his post. He should let the Chairmanship be filled by someone who supports the will of the people of this country over that of corporate campaign donors.
